Citusbille Morning Berald. An English Prelate on Female Education in America.

At the first annual meeting of the Manchester Association for Promoting the Education of Women, Dr. Fraser, bishop of the disocese, who visited the United States three years ago, a special education commissioner of the Ergish Privy Council, made as coming from a prelate who bids fair t

In the high schools of Cincinnati, if he remembered rightly, he found that the three papils studying Latin and Greek wers girls, and the metter they had selected for study were the edes of Horace in one lauguage, and the odes of Anacroon in the other. He did not know for what the particular motive they did so, but such it. It was noticed that all had originally become. particular motive they did so, but such, it happened was the branch of reading on which they were engaged. He confessed bonestly that the results, as he witnessed them in America, did not satisfy him, and, much as he saw to admire in the many high public qualities which ornamented American women, they did not meet his ideal views of what women should be. He was quite aware of the high praise which placed in the sepulchre to support the de De Tocqueville had passed upon American women. De Tocqueville, in his sketch of democratic institutions. of democratic institutions, arid it there

This being so, it was of unspeakable importance that the education given to women in Enlgand should be one that would qualify them for that which he took to be, above all others, their great function which the Creator meant to fulfill in life.

The could not welcome with any satia-

The Athenian statesman Pericles condemned too much chatter in women. When he saw ladies thrusting thomselves into he saw ladies thrusting themselves into skeleton, but so thin and palpable that it is a malicing and medicine here. there and everywhere, he was reminded piays or prince of gold or silver were found, but various implements in copper were thickly strewn about which bad evidently affairs, finding that they made a mess of it, and that it was better for them. to their own functions. He also remembered something of certain plays of Molices, which showed that even an advanced education might not redeem the female character from frivolity to petty motives. He had been asked the other day to enter the contract of into a very interesting correspondence with a lady who wrote admirably about the opening of schools of medicine to wothe opening of schools of medicine to women. Any one could see at once that the long ages of the past, another evidence there were certain departments of medical CLASS-WARE, Etc. practice which he thought with great advantage might be committed to the hands of women. Removing this they found a flight of stone steps leading down-ward a distance of ten feet, all descending these the party found themselves in what appeared to be a huge chamber, cut out of the solid rock, about twenty feet square and treaty feet bith. and twenty feet high. For a moment the men stood lost in admiration at this won-derful work. The floor beneath was hard as coming from a prelate who bids fair to become the foremost on the British bench, and who is personally acquainted with this country. The bishop said that with the exception of two great cities, Boston and Philadelphia, every high school—which was the highest grade of school in the American educational system—was a mixed school, in which boys and girls, of ages varying from fitteen to eighteen; were taught together in mixed classes and taken equally through all subjects, and he certainly was struck by the fact that the ladies in most of the cases carried off the lines of all being revealed plainly and distinct on the south side speared a representation of the such sides in most of the cases carried off the lamber was embellished with stars, serpents and chariots, the outlines of all being revealed plainly and dis-
